James A. Nolen Named Chairman Of Agriculture Credit Committee

James A. Nolen, of Appomattox, Vice President and Agricultural Services Officer of the Fidelity National Bank of Lynchburg, was selected as Chairman of the Agriculture Credit Committee June 19th. The Committee will analyze and project the agriculture credit needs in Virginia and recommend a long range development program that will aid in securing adequate financial resources and provide incentives to Virginia's vital Industry of Agriculture.

The State Board of Agriculture and Commerce had recommended to the Governor the establishment of this Committee. Governor Godwin attended the first meeting of the newly organized group and pointed out that agriculture faces a "capital crunch". He stressed the importance of providing sufficient capital and operating monies for agricultural operations, and the need to preserve good farm land. He also emphasized the necessity of providing financial resources for young people interested in entering agriculture production.

This first meeting was chaired by S. Mason Carbaugh, Commissioner of the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Commerce, who explained the objectives of the Committee. The Committee will look into agriculture credit needs during the next decade (1985) and recommend innovative credit programs to meet the projected needs of Virginia.

The Committee members agreed their's was a critically important assignment and the Committee should proceed as soon as possible to develop recommendations that can be returned to the Governor by December 1. It was agreed to hold public hearings in July and August and to call on all segments of the Industry of Agriculture and other sources to develop these recommendations by the December date.

Joseph H. Barlow, a diversified farmer from Smithfield, was selected as Vice Chairman and Graham Copeland, Director of Agricultural Opportunities Development, Virginia Department of Agriculture and Commerce, was selected as Executive Secretary.

Course Offered "How To Study In College"

College bound freshmen . . . can you answer these questions? Where's the best place to sit in a lecture? What's the technique that will make you the first one finished in a laboratory? What two simple study techniques will almost guarantee one letter grade higher in every course? What one idea can make it possible to study a textbook 24% quicker? When is the best time to study a lecture course . . . a recitation course? Do you know what the "whole-part-whole" method of study is? Why is it so important? When is studying with the radio on a good idea? What is the secret of setting a personal goal and sticking to it? When is the best time to study for a test? What is the secret of not being scared during an exam? There's an easy way to write the first draft of a term paper, what is it?

According to Professor Robert F. Schwarz, Purdue University, one of the country's leading authorities on study skills, if you are a high school senior, planning to go to college, and can't answer all of these questions, then you ought to enroll in the Virginia YMCA's "How to Study in College" course this summer. The one week four evening course will deal with a variety of study skills and many of the practical problems of adjustment to college. Topics in the series of lectures include-how students learn, why they forget, the art of listening, how to take usable lecture notes, motivation for maximum performance in college, how to plan study time, a basic study formula, techniques of review, preparing for and taking tests and examinations, what every student needs to know about each course and its professor, and personal problems and adjustment to college living.
